Advent of the Phonograph Into the

Classic Domain of Harmony. A NEW PENALTY FOR BAD SINGING

Music Publisher. GOSSIP ABOUT OUR LOCAL MUSICIANS

Original Titles Invented by the Modern

The phonograph continues to creep ahead in musical fields. The recent American concert given by Mr. Frank Van der Stucken at the Paris Exposition will be handed down to posterity in the shape of little way evlinders. Now many vocalists are beginning by its aid to hear themselves as others hear them and to realize-as Emma Abbott did in Pittsburg-how different their voices sound from what they imagined them to be. If it be true, as claimed, that all manner of lapses in tune, time phrasing or pronuncia-tion are revealed to the singer himself by having his voice bounce back to him, as it were, what a great boon to suffering hu-manity the Menlo wizard's invention will

Instead of the effective, but ungracious method of hissing a poor singer, what a poetic penalty it would be to grind out bepoetic penalty it would be to grind out be-tween acts at the dressing room door a faith-ful reproduction of what its inmate had just inflicted upon the audience. And the much-abused press critic; just fancy how, when the blg, irate tenor comes around to argue the point, he can turn his little crank and annihilate the self-convicted blunderer with a triumphant, "There! I told you so!"

"The day may come when assirants for

The day may come when aspirants for you honors—after swallowing an ammoniaphone full of genuine Italian voice, and gazing into the laryngoscope long enough to get it properly placed in the region of the crico-arytenoideous lateralis muscle, can complete their srtistic education by the purchase of an assorted dozen or so of cylindri-cal Patti's, Scalchi's, Tamagno's or Maurel's, and then practicing away at the phon-ograph until the cylinders they turn out are, line for line, scratch for scratch, micro-scopically exact duplicates of the purchased

In that day dealers in wax music will have a right to return to the good old style of title, thus: "The Swiss Echo Song, ezactly as performed with marvelous success by Jennie Lind."

Speaking of titles, a glance over the publishers' lists of popular pieces of the day is calculated to excite an amused admiration at the daring and ingenuity displayed in the daring and ingenuity displayed in the choice of such names.

Here are a few picked out at random on a local counter the other day: "Yuba Dam Quickstep," "Straight Crook Quickstep," for instance. Note the exquisite appro-priateness of the first title to that species of Dusical form known as the "quickstep."

Observe the moral delicately inculcated in the second; how the "crook," even after becoming "straight," is ever fleeing from the sword of justice. Another naively suggestive designation is "Clog Dance. gestive designation is, "Clog Dance, 'Grecian Statue' "—probably alluding to some colored Galatea of the male persuasion. Then there are the anagramatic titles got then there are the annaramatic titles got up mechanically by reversing the order of letters, etc. Such as these were noted: "Overture, 'Enotirab' for baritone." "Tuba obligato, 'Oles-Abut;'" "Alto obligato, 'Otiaolos;'" "Trombone solo, 'Enobmort." If the originality and fertility of invention shows in some of these narrows only are tion shown in some of these names only ex-tended beyond the title page how much more good music the world would possess.

Since the American Musician so handtomely concedes the strength of the adverse It does not mean to the form of the organization assumed by the present and the M. T. N. A. meetings, it would be ungenerous not to admit the too-sweeping nature of the term "ultra-Anglican" applied in this column to the journal in question. It was not meant to imply that the esteemed Musician is not American in its sympathies, as in its name; but that, where no question of our own country is involved, it leans strongly to the English schools and from the German—an antithesis quite natural in the connection in which the term was originally employed. It may be frankly admitted that the Musician is, as it claims to be, "thoroughly American inside, outside, upside, down-side, frontside and hindside." And it is just exactly this ubiquitousness of its Ameri-canism, this practice of scanning all kinds of questions by the tallowdip of national exclusiveness; it is, in short, the "know-nothingism" of the American Musician that gives rise to its silly and futile protests against drawing upon the Old World for our best orchestral conductors and players.

The following list of American conductors is given by that journal as being quite as fit as Mr. Arthur Nikisch to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Adolf Neu-endorff, E. A. McDowell, George W. Chad-wick, of Boston; Theodore Thomas, Frank Van der Stucken, John C. Reitzel, Victor Herbert, Edgar S. Kelley, and Americo Gori, of New York: Charles M. Schmitz, of Philadelphia; Asger Hamerik and W. Ed-ward Heimendahl, of Baltimore; August Waldaner, of St. Louis; Han Palatka, of Chicago, and Gustav Hinrichs, of San

Upon this list, Mr. Arthur Weld, the gifted young composer and conductor, makes the following pertinent comments in the Boston Post:

One is instantly struck by the distinctly American flavor of this list of names. With the exception of Mr. Chadwick (Mr. McDowell makes no pretensions as a conductor) I believe there is not a single ganulue American name on the list. Let us look at the matter more makes no pretensions as a conductor) I believe there is not a single genulne American name on the list. Let us look at the matter more closely and from a purely professional—let us say musical—point of view. To be a conductor in the highest sense of the word one must be more than an admirable musician. It is a peculiar gift, and many of the greatest musiclans have not possessed it in the least degree. It also requires unceasing training and practice. Arthur Nikisch has officiated as conductor of the Leipsic Opera House for more than ten years. He has conducted numbers of times all of the standard classical operas and has brought out under his own supervision many new works. One may say without exaggeration that for ten years he has conducted either important rehearsals or actual performances every day. He was named by Levy as his preferred successor at Bayreuth; and in general musical circles he is reckoned as one of the five or six greatest conductors in Europe. As competitors with him a list of general musical circles he is reckoned as one of the five or six greatest conductors in Europe. As competitors with him a list of general musical circles he is reckoned as one of the numerous small orchestras and choral societies in different American office, holding probably one or two rehearnals a week, with amateur singers and "secratch" orchestras. Is this in the least just or is it even honorable? All of these "American foreigners" may be excellent musicians, and doubtless are, but they lack the training, the experience, the daily practice of conducting, and above all they are not Americans. They came to this country because they hoped to make money here. Mr. Nikisch comes probably in precisely the same spirit; but being the better man he gets a position which very few of the others would even have applied for. This same society of musicians in New York which in this country is chiefly composed of Germans. Why did they come here? Evidently because they aposition fimself, and immediately we have a living example of Crotchers and Quavers.

ACCORDING to reports of her appearances in Berlin last month, Etelka Gerster's lovely voice is not a thing of the dead past, after all. MR. EDWARD SCOVEL writes to the London MR. EDWARD SCOVEL WHEE to the LORDON Figure that he has been engaged for the season of 1889-80 by the Boston Ideals for "Lohengrin," "Carmen," "Faust" and "Trovatore," to sing four times a week at a salary of £100 ($500) per says: "Signor Faccio is the first Italian orches tra leader of our times. Under his baton the instrumentalists were marvellous, and no orchestra can be compared to that of the Lyccum, in the execution of Verdi's immense

ME. JOHN HOWARD, the emment vocal teacher whose previous stay in Pittsburg won him the high esteem of his pupils (among whom were such leading singers as Mrs. Jean Wallace Webster, Miss Rosa. Weber, Messrs. D. M. Bullock, Ross W. Drum and J. N. Beboutl, will be welcomed back for another two or three months in the city this summer. A curtous paper by an English organist upon "Melody in Speech" asserts that a cow moos in a perfect fifth and octave or tenth; a moos in a perfect fifth and octave or tenth; a dog barks in a fifth or fourth, a donkey brays in a perfect octave; a horse neighs in a descent on the chromatic scale. Each person has his fundamental key, in which he generally speaks, but which he often transposes in sympathy with other voices, or when he is excited.

DR. F. L. RITTER, of Vassar College, corrected the generally accepted opinion attribut-ing to Guillame Franck the writing of the "Old Hundreth" psalm. "The tune," writes Dr. Ritter, "Is due to Louis Bourgeois, who adapted it from a popular air of the fifteenth century. In the Genevan Psalter, the tune is set to the 184th Psalm. Louis Bourgeois was born in Paris in the first part of the sixteenth century."

A Louisville sparrow found a queer resting place the other day-the interior of an organ pipe. Queerer yet is the statement going the pipe. Queerer yet is the statement going the rounds of the musical press that the presence of this sparaow put the organ out of tune for days, and caused an organ builder to be called in to see what was the matter. When any difficulty with a single one of the thousands of pipes in an organ is enough to move a church music committee to have the instrument but in order, the millenium will have arrived.

MR. SIMEON BISSELL, of our town, discourses learnedly in an Eastern musical paper upon the ultra-scientific voice cultivator. This upon the ultra-scientific voice cultivator. Inia is a feeling portrayal of a not uncommon experience: "If the pupil has ever been a pupil of another teacher or a number of teachers, as the case usually is, then the fiery indignation of the great discoverer, we more, the great creator of the only true method of voice building, comes down upon the pates of the voice butchers who have dared to attempt to teach what is still a mystery to all the world save the great voice builder."

MR. BARNABEE, who returned to Boston last week after a season of 42 weeks, says: "We have been from Maine to California, played to 'standing room only' nearly everywhere, taken enough money to pay everybody all we owed them, gave ourselves (Messrs. Karl, MacDonald and myself. I mean) our regular salaries and put away $25,000 for future operations. We are satisfied, and have health, as well as wealth, as a result of the hard work of our long season." Apparently the old favorites of "The Bostonians" had some reason for staying out West and missing Pittsburg for the first season in many years. standing room only' nearly everywhere, taken

Cur this out and paste it in your Grove

CUT this out and paste it in your Grove supplement; the London Figure is responsible for it: Bottesini's name was, perhaps, not con-sidered of sufficient importance to be included sidered of sufficient importance to be included in "Sir George Grove's Dictionary," but it duly appears in the "Appendix." In that extraordinary work the date of Bottosin's birth is put down at 1822, whereas as a matter of fact he was born in 1821. Furthermore, it was not at the age of 11 but at 13 (he was indeed nearly 14) that application was made by him to be admitted to the Milan Conservatory. It is, moreover, not true there was then only one vacant place, and that for a contrabassist. Indeed, there were two scholarships open for competition, one for the bassoon and the other for the double bass. The youthful Bottesini decided for the latter, simply because he had already acquired a certain knowledge of the instrument while under the tuition of his uncle Cogliati. The date of Bottesini's first appearance in this country is also misquoted. His debut, at any rate, according to himself, was at Alary's concert at Exteer Hall, in 1848, and not at the Musical Union in June, 1849, while the extraordinary statement in Grove's dictionary appendix, that on the in Grove's ductionary appendix, that on the latter occasion he played the violoncello, requires verification.
